Lee Cheng and Alex Chae honored at 2015 AABA Gala

Lee Cheng, Chief Legal Officer, SVP of Corporate Development and Corporate Secretary of Newegg Inc., presented the keynote speech at the AABA’s annual Gala on September 18, 2015, at the JW Marriott Downtown. Alexander Chae, litigation partner at Gardere Wynne Sewell LLP, was recognized with the AABA's Impact Award. The Impact Award is presented to an attorney who has made significant contributions to the growth and development of the Asian American legal community in Houston. The Asian American Bar Foundation also presented many law students and non-profit organizations with scholarships and grants.

A warm congratulations and thanks to Lee, Alex, MC Miya Shay from ABC-13 News, the Gala Co-Chairs, student volunteers, and recipients of the AABF awards.

Meet an AABA Member

Name: Nicole Su
Firm/Company: University of Houston Law Center - 2L
Practice Areas: Still exploring

1. If I weren’t an attorney, I would be . . . the owner of a coffee shop.
2. The oddest food I have ever eaten has been . . . pig ears.
3. In my spare time, I enjoy . . . playing tennis and trying new restaurants!
4. If my life were a movie, it would be called . . . The Travels, Adventures, and Mishaps of a Coffee Addict.
5. In my opinion, the best restaurant/bar in Houston is . . . Pax Americana – so much attention to detail and incredible flavors.
6. In my opinion, the most underrated restaurant/bar in Houston is . . . Tacos-a-go-go—my go to taco place.
7. The coolest store in Houston is . . . SPACE – next to Common Bond. They sell great products from local artists!
8. The sports teams I root for are . . . The Houston Astros, Chicago White Sox, and Seattle Mariners (I’ve lived in all three cities). Oh and the Northwestern Wildcats Football (#17 baby!)
9. My favorite decade for music is the 2000’s, and my favorite song is . . . Anything by Jason Mraz.
10. My favorite quote is . . . “Crushing crime is 24/7” – Ruben Perez, AUSA
11. I recommend reading . . . Devil in the White City by Erik Larson.
12. Most AABA members probably don’t know that . . . I hate pickles.
1. If I weren't an attorney, I would be . . . unemployed (actually I would like to be an ER physician but I don't think any accredited medical school in the United States would admit me now)

2. In my spare time, I enjoy . . . watching my children mature and being their coach.

3. If my life were a movie, it would be called . . . Star Wars, you go figure out which character.

4. In my opinion, the best restaurant/bar in Houston is . . . Common Bond.

5. In my opinion, the most underrated restaurant/bar in Houston is . . . Anything run by Monica Pope, she is a good friend and a great chef.

6. A deserving charity I recommend giving to is . . . Lone Star Legal Aid.

7. The sports team I root for is . . . Rice Owls.

8. My favorite decade for music is the . . . Sixties . . . and my favorite song is . . . Sounds of Silence by Simon and Garfunkel.

10. I recommend reading . . . anything by Churchill. Reading Churchill makes you a better writer.

11. Most AABA members probably don’t know that I . . . appeared on Antiques Roadshow.

Chan is Missing
Part of the film series, Newcomers: Three Films on Immigration
Presented by Dr. Karen Fang, UH
Saturday, October 17 at 7:00 p.m.

Made for just $20,000, the breakthrough film of director Wayne Wang (The Joy Luck Club) follows two Chinatown cabbies as they search for a man who disappeared with their savings. Gently dismantling stereotypes of oriental inscrutability and implementing the well-tread conventions of Hollywood mysteries, the movie’s witty script and timeless black and white images pack in references from Charlie Chan and Sam Spade, Blow-Up to Chinatown. A landmark independent film – and first feature film starring an entirely Asian American cast – this love letter to the incommensurable diversity of American identity was praised by Vincent Canby as a “matchless delight.” – Karen Fang

"Chan is Missing" is a small, whimsical treasure of a film that gives us a real feeling for the people of San Francisco's Chinatown. And at some point while we're watching this film, we may realize that we have very little idea of Chinatowns, in San Francisco or elsewhere, that haven't been shaped by mass-produced Hollywood clichés like the Charlie Chan movies. The title "Chan is Missing" is almost a pun, because Charlie Chan is missing from this film, and what replaces him is a warm, low-key, affectionate and funny look at some real Chinese-Americans.

The movie's plot is simplicity itself. The heroes of the film, two taxi drivers, go looking for Chan because he owes them some money and he has disappeared. They search for him more out of curiosity than vengeance; they don't really think he intended to steal the money, but they can't figure out why he would have disappeared without paying it. Familiar with the ways of Chinatown, they knock on doors and talk to people and, almost without realizing it, we are taken beyond the plot into the everyday lives of these people.

The movie has an unforced, affectionate sense of humor about its characters. There's a cheerfully cynical analysis of how the annual Chinese New Year's parade has been turned into a competition between factions loyal to Taiwan and to mainland China. There's a philosophical cook, whose resignation in the face of the inevitable sounds anything but resigned. There's a political activist who dissects the politics of Chinatown with a fine-tooth comb.

And there's a fascinating discussion involving linguistics, as a young sociology student tries to explain why Chan recently said "no" to a cop when he meant "yes." We can almost follow her logic: Chan was replying to the truth of his action rather than to the meaning of the question, you see, and so although his taxi did indeed go through the red light, he did not drive it through the red light but was, in a sense, a bystander in the driver's seat as the taxi autonomously violated the law. I'm making it sound complicated; the linguist makes it funny.

"Chan is Missing" has already become something of a legend because of the way it was filmed. The movie's director, producer, editor and co-author is a young filmmaker named Wayne Wang, a 33-year-old San Franciscan who made the movie on a $22,000 budget, with a little help from his friends. He wanted to examine the ways in which Chinatown was both Chinese and American -- and who would be better qualified to do that than a director whose last name is Chinese and whose first name was inspired by John Wayne?

Wang's plot owes a little to "The Third Man," I suppose, as his heroes question people about a man who is presumed missing and whose life turns out to be more complicated than anyone would have thought. But "Chan is Missing" isn't really a thriller or a whodunit and doesn't pretend to be. It's an excursion. It takes us through a part of America we haven't been able to see before in the movies. It takes us into the kitchens of Chinese restaurants, and into the offices of Chinese-American social workers. It takes us into hotels for transients, sleazy bars and politician's offices.

By the time we've finished the odyssey, we realize a curious thing: There may not be a Chan, and it doesn't matter if he's missing. What's important is that everyone has a different idea of Chan, filtered through his own consciousness. And we realize (for ourselves, because the film is never obvious about this point) that Chinese-Americans, more than many other ethnic groups in this country, are seen by the rest of us through a whole series of filters and fictions. We "know" them from movies and walk-ons in TV cop shows, from the romanticized images of fiction and from ubiquitous Chinese restaurants, but we don't really know them at all.

Dear Colleagues,

The United States Attorney’s Office for the Southern District of Texas is pleased to announce the creation of the Civil Rights Section in the Civil Division. The Civil Rights Section will welcome information from the public that brings to its attention possible violations of our nation’s civil rights laws and will have the authority to investigate and to remedy civil rights violations within the Southern District of Texas.

In conjunction with its creation, the Civil Rights Section cordially invites you and your organization to attend our Civil Rights Symposium on Wednesday, October 7, 2015. The Symposium will be held at the Michael T. Shelby Conference Center, 1000 Louisiana, Suite 2300, Houston, Texas from 9:30 a.m. to 3:30 p.m.

The Civil Rights Section is honored to announce that the Symposium will feature speakers Vanita Gupta, Head of the Civil Rights Division, Department of Justice and Keith P. Ellison, United States District Judge. The Symposium will discuss our nation’s federal civil rights laws in the areas of disability, housing, and education, and highlight the role of the United States Attorney’s Office in ensuring compliance and effective monitoring in a variety of emerging areas of affirmative civil rights enforcement. The Symposium will also offer the opportunity for participants to discuss questions or concerns regarding civil rights compliance and enforcement issues in the Southern District of Texas. The Symposium has been approved for 3.75 hours of MCLE credit for Texas attorneys.

The vitality and effectiveness of our nation’s civil rights laws depends on the community’s awareness of its rights and compliance obligations. The Symposium is an excellent forum for individuals and private entities to learn about their rights and responsibilities under the applicable laws.

Enclosed is a Save the Date for the Symposium. Participation in the Symposium is by invitation only, so please be sure to RSVP. Thank you for your continued commitment to our community, and we look forward to seeing you at the Symposium.

Sincerely,

Keith Edward Wyatt
Assistant United States Attorney
Chief, Civil Division
Civil Rights Symposium
